New Marking for Dangerous Goods in Limited Quantities

Effective Date January 1, 2011

A new marking replacing "LTD QTY" or the UN Number placed inside a diamond has been adopted by ICAO and IATA Regulations and will be required as of January 1, 2011.

The previous marking has been replaced by a diamond-shaped marking, the top and bottom portion shall be black with the center area white which will include the symbol "Y" which shall have minimum dimensions of 100 mm x 100 mm.

This new requirement will also be a requirement in the IMDG Code Amendment 35, with a slight difference. The "Y" symbol in the center is not required, however packages containing dangerous goods in limited quantities consigned for air transport bearing the marking with the "Y" will be accepted for international shipments of dangerous goods in limited quantities. The cargo units containing dangerous goods in only limited quantities shall be suitably marked on the exterior with the new marking which shall have a minimum of 250 mm x 250 mm.
